How do i program my ge universal remote to my westinghouse tv

By David Johnston i Hemera Technologies/AbleStock.com/Getty Images If you have purchased a universal remote to control your TV with basic cable, you'll first need to program it so that it is synchronized to control your particular brand and model of television and cable box. Because different brands and models of universal remotes have varying steps for programming them, it's important that you consult the manual that came with your product. If you no longer have the manual, you also can check the manufacturer's website for details. However, there are a few basic steps that work for many brands and can serve as a guideline as you program your remote. Find the device code in the user manual or manufacturer's website that matches your TV and your cable box make and model. Turn on your TV and your cable box. Most universal remotes allow you to control more than one device, but you must program them one at a time. Press the device button on the remote that corresponds to the device you are programming. Therefore, press the one labeled "TV" while you are programming the TV. Likewise, when you are programming the cable box, press the "satellite/cable" button. Press and hold the "setup" button for a few seconds. Many remotes will have an LED light that blinks when you have held the button long enough. If you don't see a setup button, look for a button labeled "set" or "program." Enter the code you located from the user manual or manufacturer's website. If there is an LED indicator light, it should blink again. Press the power or channel change buttons to test if it has worked. Turn on your TV and cable box. You must program each device one at a time. Press and hold the "setup" button for a few seconds, or until you see an indicator LED light blink. If you do not see a setup button, look for a button labeled "set" or "program" or similar. Repeatedly press the selector button until your device turns off. Different brands use different buttons as the selector button. For example, some may require you to repeatedly press the volume button, while others may require you to press the channel button. Check your user manual or the manufacturer's website for details. If you've ever felt like programming a television remote was an impossible task, you aren't alone. From searching for all TV remote codes to finally picking the right one, remote key programming can feel like a nonstarter. However, with this quick guide, you'll learn how to program your remote quickly.What Is a Universal Remote?For some people, the universal remote might be the best invention ever. While you used to have to buy the precise remote for your television or DVD player, these remotes let you control all your electronics from the same remote. Other benefits include backlit displays included on most models and the compatibility with many electronic devices. Some of today's remotes can be described as "smart remotes," that control everything from your television to the lighting to the thermostat.Programming BasicsAlthough the exact steps you need to take to program your remote may differ from model to model and brand to brand, the basics typically remain the same. The basic steps to program a remote without the codes include the following:Turn the television on Press the button on the remote labeled for your television. Press the "TV" button until it lights up and stays lit. Point your remote toward the television and press the power button until the television turns off. Press "Enter" on the remote and the light should go off. The remote is now programmed and ready to use with your television. Finding Remote CodesIf you can find the code to sync your remote with your television, the programming process should be even easier. If you have the packaging or the instruction manual that came with your remote, you'll have a list of all TV remote codes at the ready. If you don't, note the brand and model of your TV and visit the manufacturer's website.Remote Key Programming PitfallsThere are two main troubles that you may encounter when you program your remote: not using the exact model's code and not being on the right frequency. If you input the code for a model that's close but not exact, some functions may work while others could fail.Likewise, you should make sure your device's settings are the same frequency your remote sends. Components typically operate on infrared (IR) or radio frequency (RF).TroubleshootingFor many remote users, two main problems seem to arise: the remote not working correctly and random devices turning on seemingly by themselves. If you're working with an IR remote, it requires a clear line of sight to communicate with your television. If your remote isn't working, the odds are pretty good that you need to keep the remote pointed at the TV until it receives all the commands.If you notice random devices turning on or off after pressing a command into your remote, then you may have what Yahoo! calls gremlins. This is a conflict caused by HDMI CEC. Turn off HDMI CEC in your television and home theater settings and you should be good to go.
